SCHOOL SONG

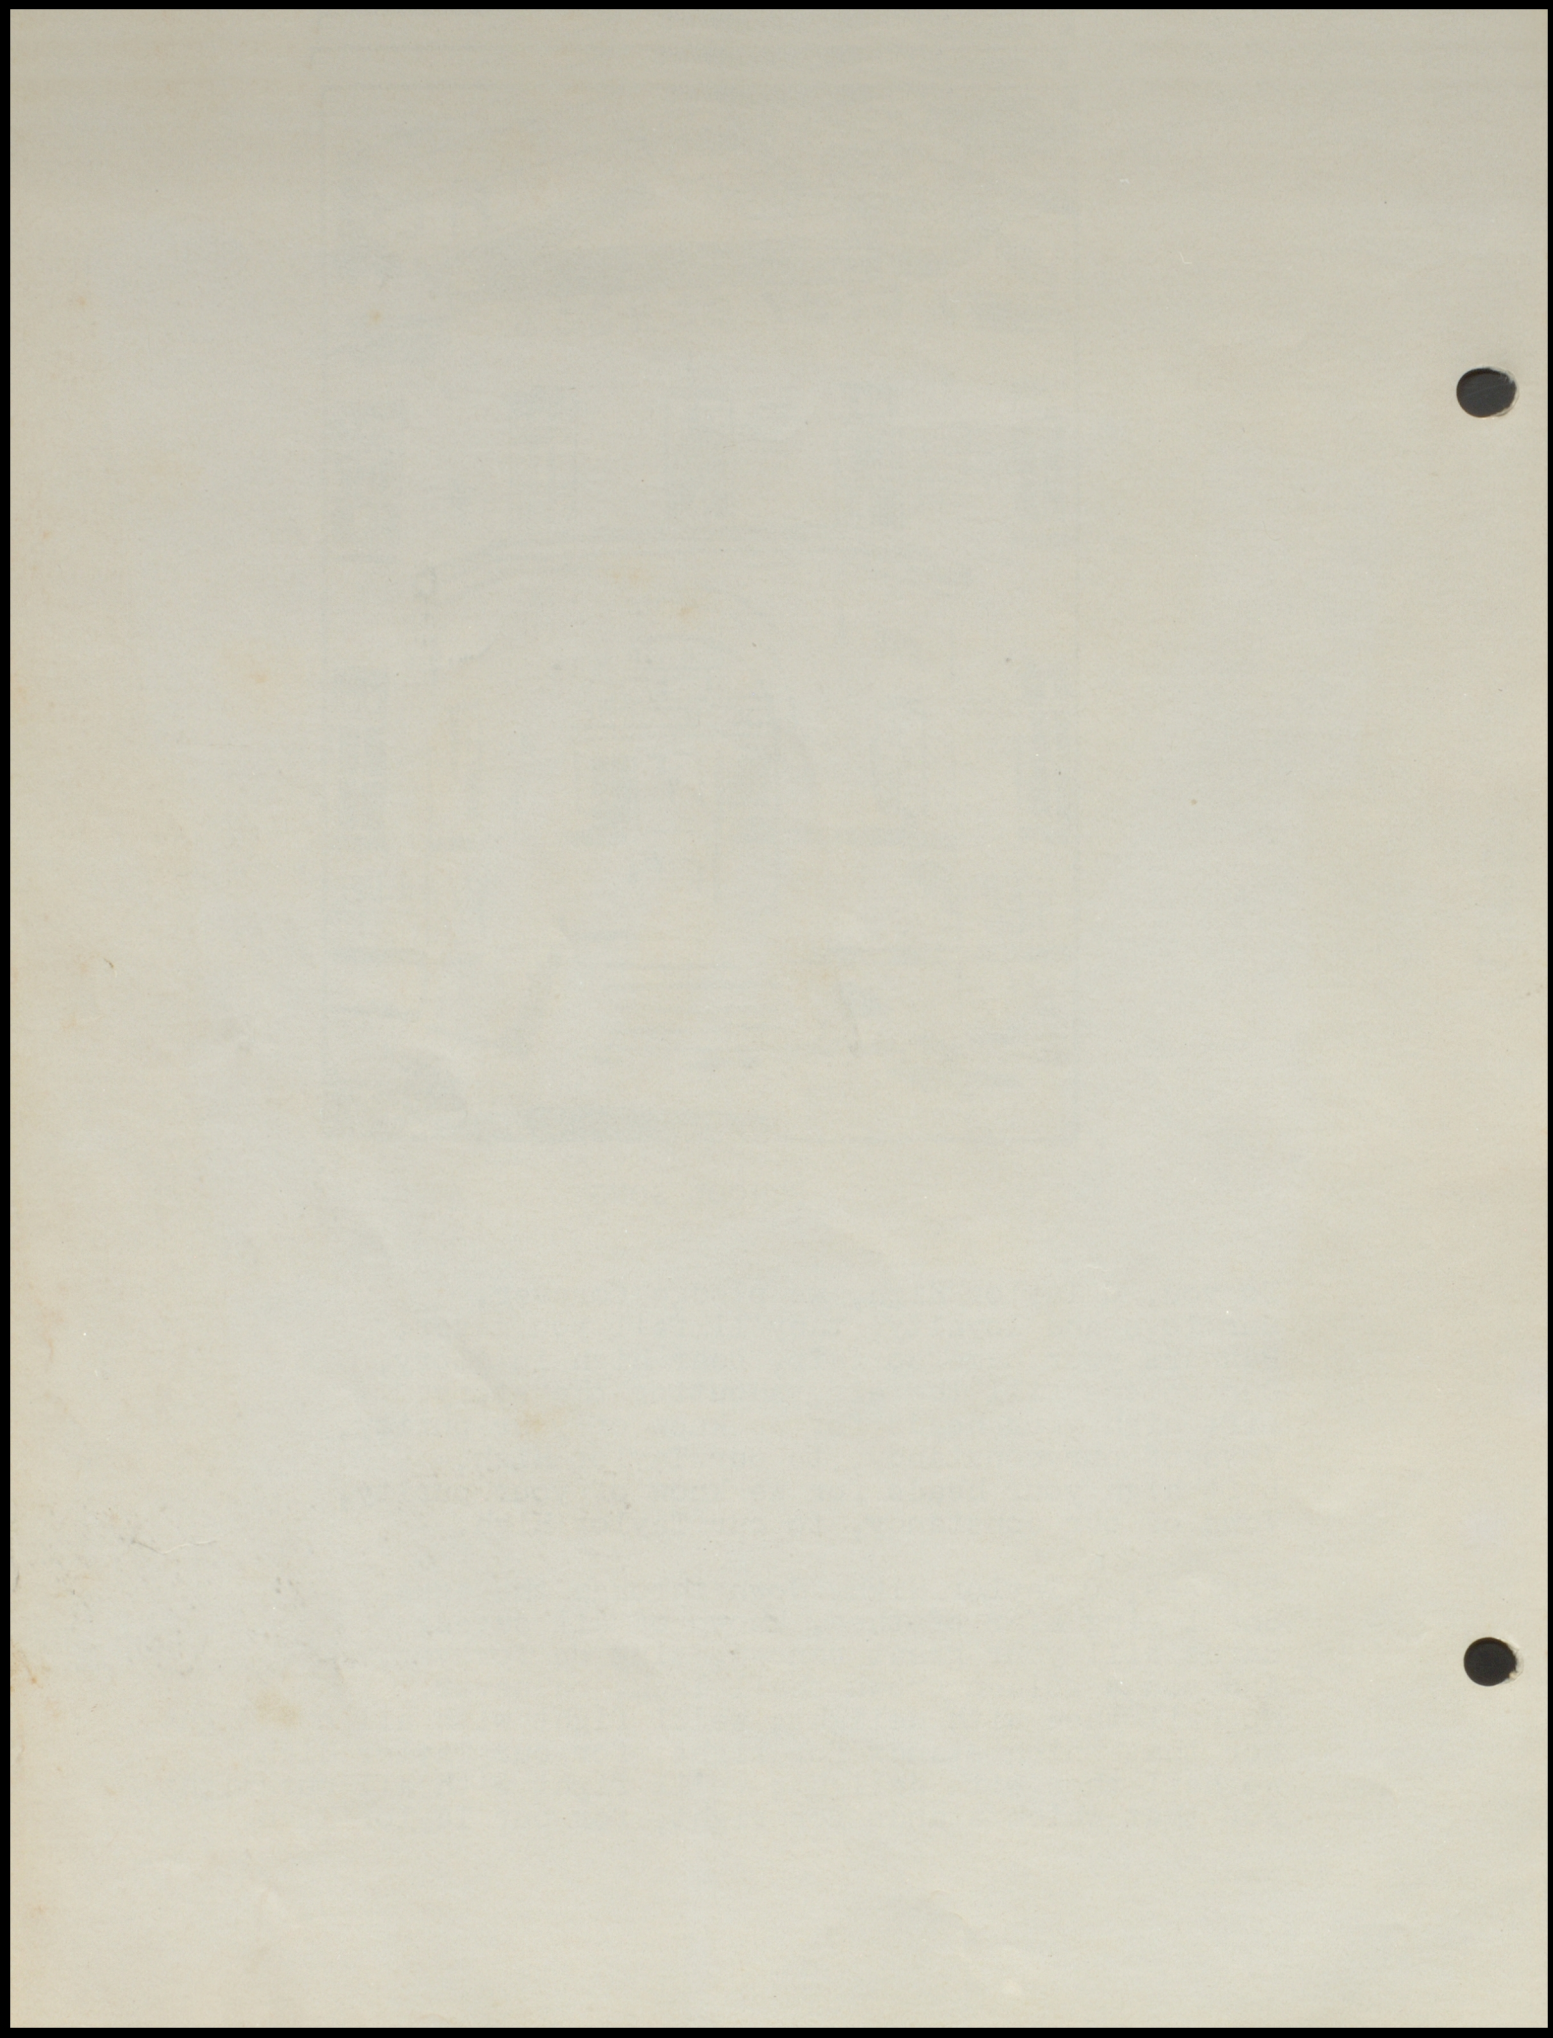

To you, O Taylor High, we pledge forever,
Our love and loyalty, they'll fail you never;
Banners your name so fair, bear high in glory,
Our voices fill the air, shouting the story.
Lift high your heads for we know of your purity,
Vows of our constancy, to our Taylor High,
Lift high your heads for we know of your purity,
Vows of our constancy, to our Taylor High.

Praises, O Taylor High, down through the ages,
Shall ring afar of thee, known of all sages;
Bards will your great renown, sing on forever,
And you a golden crown shall lack, oh never.
We hail thee with delight; we'll fight with all our might,
For that which stands for right, for our Taylor High,
We hail thee with delight; we'll fight with all our might,
For that which stands for right, for our Taylor High.

A NOTE TO OUR FRIENDS:

To dedicate a work such as this is a difficult task, because we owe much to so many people--our parents, teachers, friends, and classmates. Only with their continual sacrifice, interest, and consideration have we been able to develop the knowledge and skill so necessary for the telling of our story and the story of our school in your 1951 "Echo." Yes, it is your "Echo". We dedicate it to you as a token of our deep appreciation of your efforts in our behalf, and as a pledge that we will strive to conduct ourselves in such manner as to never give you cause to think your efforts were made in vain. We sincerely hope that you enjoy reading your "Echo."

ODE TO TAYLOR

Proud we are to have known thee
To have tread often through thy halls
Proud to have had the echoes of our voices
Mingled with others between thy walls.

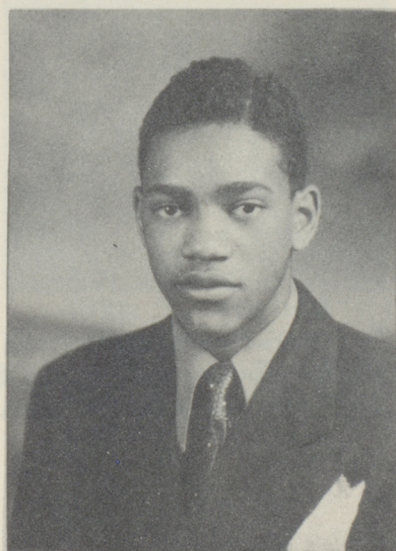

Long and well shall we remember
The difficult days we've had
Nor shall the days ever be forgotten
When our hearts were so very glad.

To many thou hast been a beacon light
And have given to them much joy
Sending forth strong rays of encouragement
To many a struggling girl and boy.

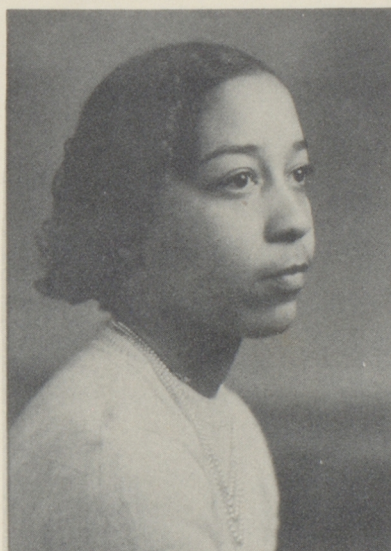

Thou hast been like an oak tree
Standing sturdily through the years
Hearing much of joy and laughter
As well as of sorrow and tears.

Sorrowful we are to leave thee
To go on in our various ways
But we will not fail to love thee
And always sing thy praise.

Class History

In 1947 our class, 27 in number, entered Taylor High School as freshmen. Looking eagerly toward our year's work, we immediately organized a class club. We soon learned that we had to work as well as play. Under the direction and leadership of our class sponsor, Mr. Harrod, we laid our foundation on which to build our four years' work. There were parties and dances, of course, but our chief concern was organization. As June closed our school year, we found that we had done well, but we had not reached our goal.

As sophomores, we found that we were more mature in our thinking and planning. We reorganized our club, and set out again to accomplish even more than we had accomplished the previous year. To our club came another sponsor, Mr. Moody, and with him came new ideas. As our sponsor had been before, Mr. Moody was helpful and considerate. His ambition and usefulness inspired us to work still harder. All year we planned and worked. We were recognized by the other classes as being a talented, aggressive, and determined class. Alfred Jordan and Ellison Hearn were given important roles in the school play. Academically we received recognition, and socially we were accepted.

Great responsibility and determination for continued success ushered in our junior year. We published a weekly paper called "The Taylor Tattler" which kept the student body informed on school activities. This success encouraged us, and we found ourselves attempting many tasks that would otherwise seem beyond our reach. With all junior classes comes the "headache" of giving the Junior-Senior Prom. This responsibility was ours and we accepted it with enthusiasm. Our one thought was to make this a most successful prom. This was only possible through work and co-operation. To highlight the evening, Miss Vivian Head was crowned queen.

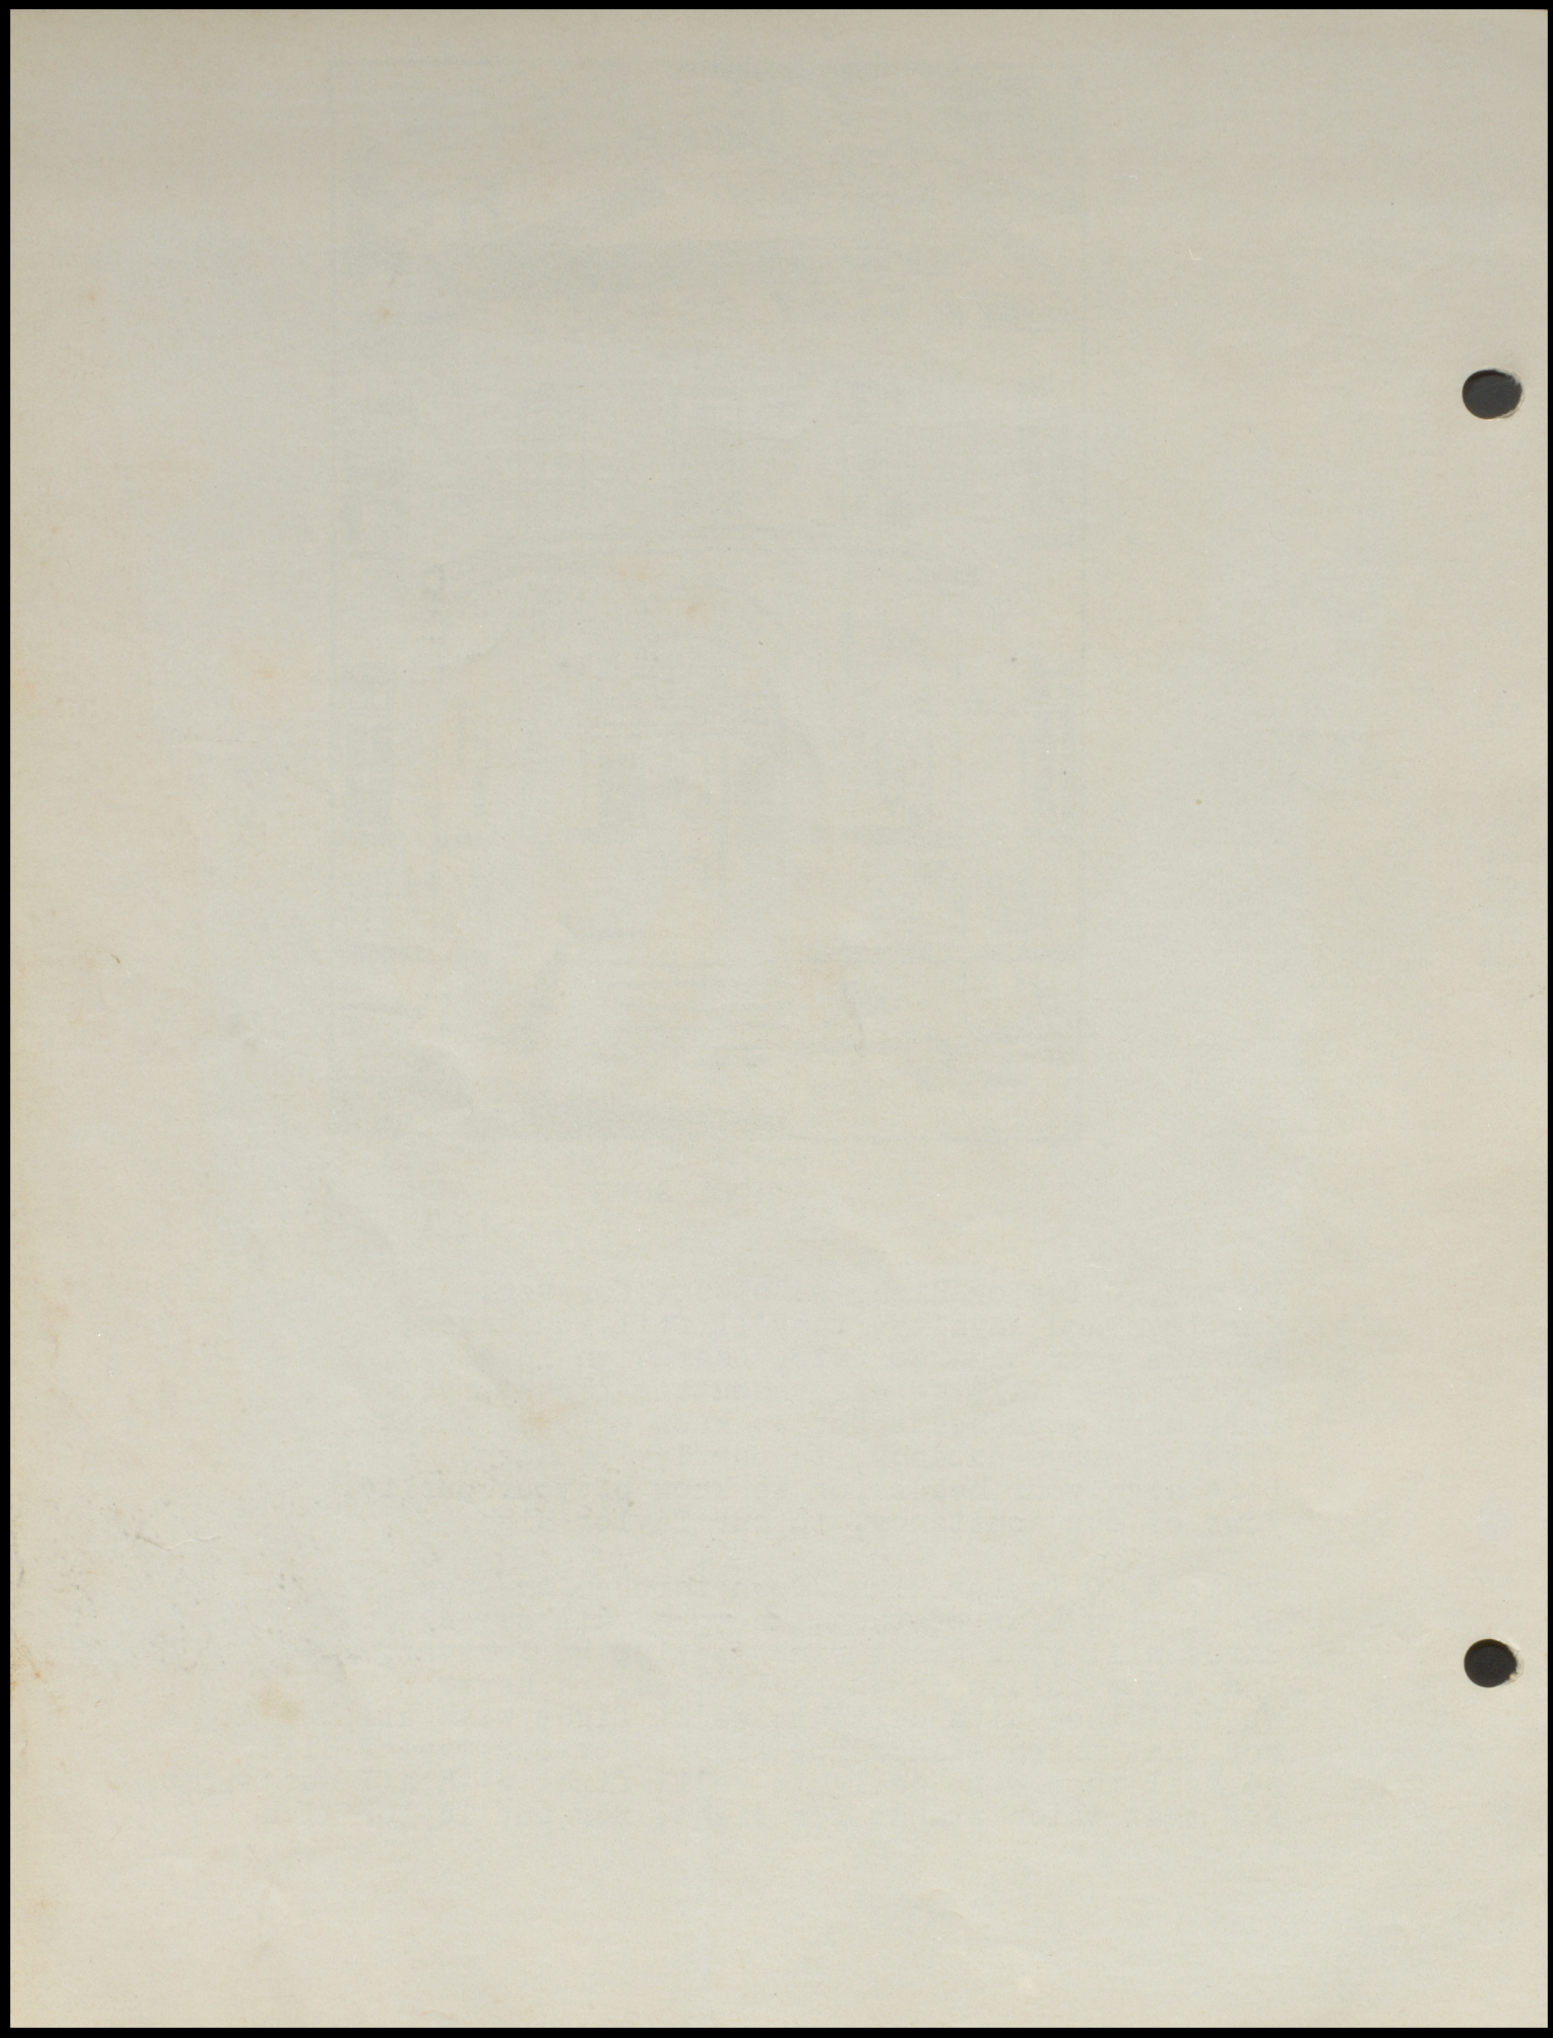

September, 1950, found us entering the school year as seniors. There was yet much to be done. Early in the year we elected our club officers and began our work. The year book staff was appointed and work was begun. Several members from our class were chosen to participate in the school play. Along with all this came the thrill of selecting class rings, being fitted for caps and gowns, etc.

With each day that passes we are looking forward more expectantly toward our graduation day. It has been said that "school days" are one's happiest days. Of this we are convinced for as we leave Taylor High School, we shall carry with us many treasured memories.

Class Prophecy

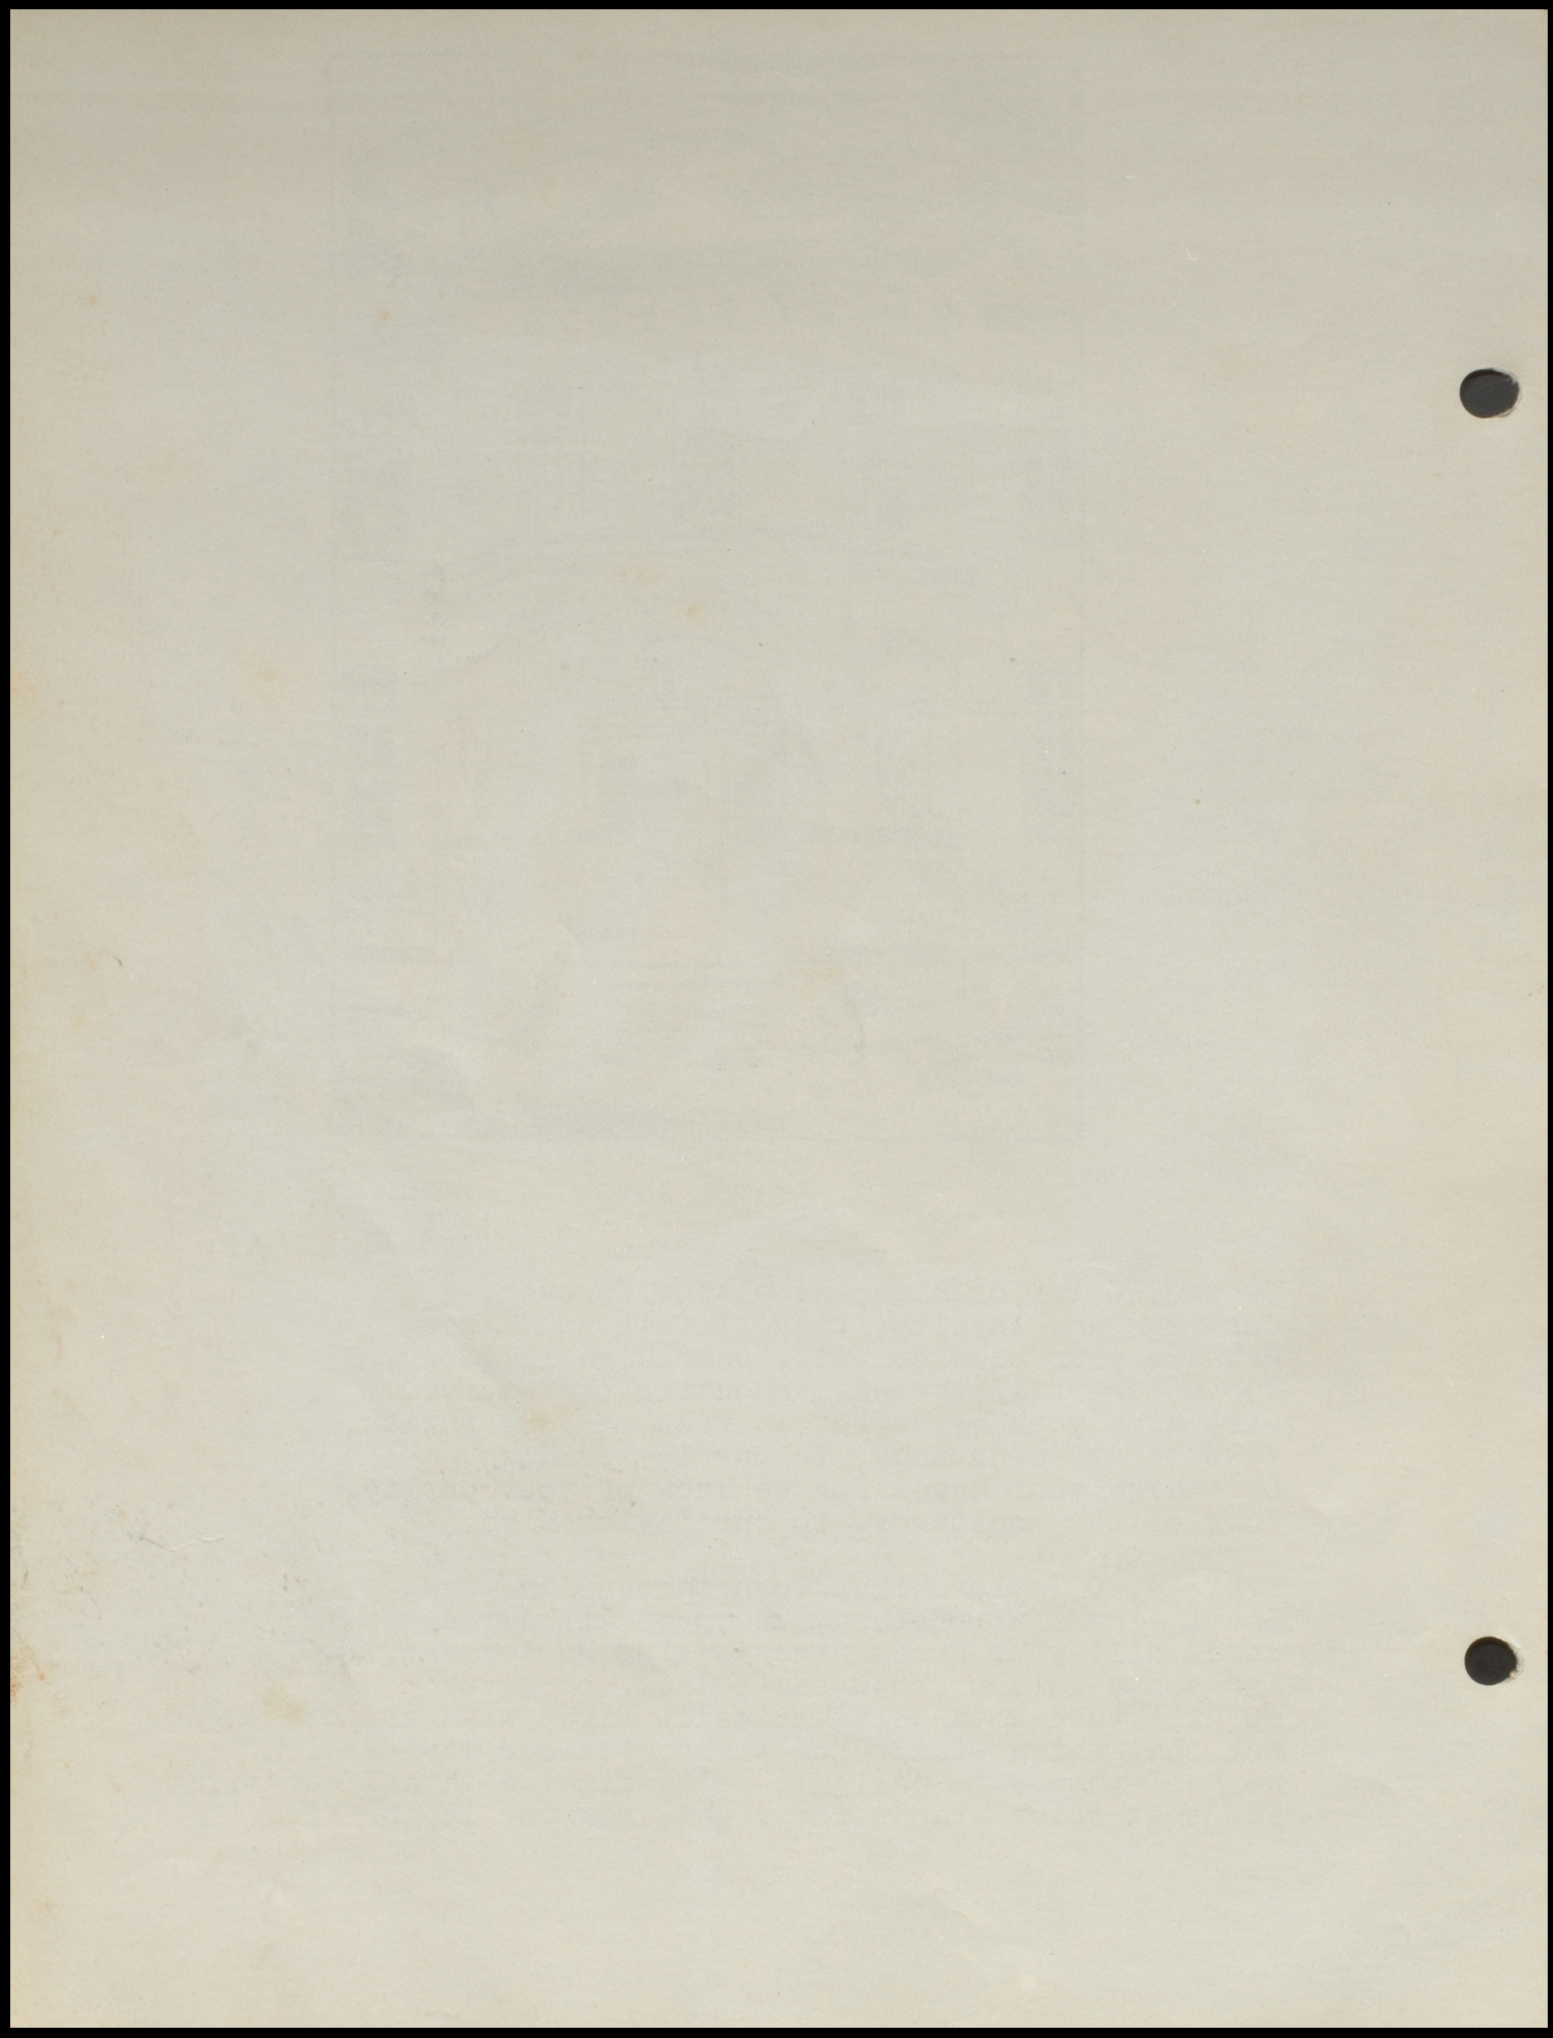

The year is 1961, and I, Ruth Kinnaird, have established myself in the music world. For some time now, I have been the pianist for the famous Sunset Trio who last week closed a 25 week engagement at the Astor Hotel in New York. Our manager just informed us that we are to go to the west coast where we will entertain in Los Angeles, California. Upon arriving at the Flame Showbar, where we were to entertain, I learned that the owners were none other than our old classmates, Vivian Head and George Oglesby. I must say I was surprised, but little did I know that this was only the beginning. As I was cruising near Hollywood and Vine on my way to a movie that same evening, I saw a familiar looking man coming out of a studio. Upon looking more closely, I recognized him as being James Hancock. We chatted for awhile and he informed me that he was currently starred in a movie entitled "The Hardwood Five."

The next day I decided to go to the Arena where they were having top notch boxing from the east. In the main event, Joseph L. Brown keyoed his opponent in the first round. After the fight I learned that this was the same Joseph Brown with whom I attended school, so I immediately went to his dressing room hoping to get an opportunity to talk to him. To my delight, he suggested that we have dinner at the exclusive restaurant called Jordan's Joy. When we went to pay the check, we recognized the owner as being Elizabeth Jordan, another of our classmates. Joe and I gave up the idea of leaving and settled down for the evening to talk.

The next day being Saturday, I went out to the General Hospital to entertain the patients. As I walked in the door, I saw Stella Oglesby at the desk. She told me she was the head nurse. Oh yes, I forgot to mention the fact that Elizabeth told me that her brother, Alfred Jordan, was a doctor at this same hospital. Before I could inquire about him, he walked in. We couldn't talk very long as they were busy and I, too, had my duties.

After staying on the coast for a few weeks, the trio was billed to return to New York. With much reluctance, I made my adieus to my friends and caught the train.

A few nights later I went to a concert at the Metropolitan Opera House. The Leading male singer was Henry Wright. His accompanist was Mable Oglesby, the most outstanding pianist of our time. It was indeed a thrill to see my good friends and former classmates render their usual matchless performance. The next day I went to New York's largest library in order to secure a few novels which I planned to read in my leisure time. I almost forgot the novels, because I spent so much time talking with Joan Hughes, the head librarian. It was only natural that she was so anxious to hear the news of our friends, and I must confess, I was just as anxious to tell her. Before I left, Joan told me there was to be an Art Exhibit and National Contest at one of New York's largest museums. We decided that we would attend together.

We arrived at the museum early in order to browse around awhile before the announcement of the winners. We browsed too long, for just as we entered the room, the last winner had been announced. The winners were still on the platform though, and we thought we saw a familiar face. After they left the platform, we sought out the man, and it was Ellison Hearn. We learned that he and his wife, the former Juanita McMurtry, had just returned from Paris France, where he had been studying. He immediately phoned Juanita to tell her that Joan and I would be there for dinner. Unfortunately, Joan had to return to the library, so I had to go alone. The Hearn's have a spacious home in the metropolitan area of New York. That being my first visit to their home, I was quite overcome as I entered the spacious residence. I must say, I was entertained royally.

After seeing so many of my old friends, I became homesick, so the following week I caught the train for Jeffersonville, Indiana, my old home town.

Last Will and Testament

We the class of '51, Taylor High School, being proud and in as sound mental condition as possible--and better temper than usual--do hereby make, publish, and declare this to be our Last Will and Testament.

I, Juanita McMurtry, leave the shorthand which I couldn't transcribe, and my flip ways, to anyone who will take them.

I, James Hancock, leave my clowning ways to Winston Baker. I also leave next year's basketball team without a center.

I, Ruth Kinnaird, leave my piano playing and all cast off boy friends to Emma Evans.

I, George Oglesby, leave Mr. Moody with a headache.

I, Joseph Brown, will my big fine muscles to Jesse Conley.

I, Stella Oglesby, leave nothing; I am taking Henry Wright with me.

I, Alfred Jordan, will my paper route to Kenneth Bowyer.

I, Mable Oglesby, will my bashful smile to Anna Adams.

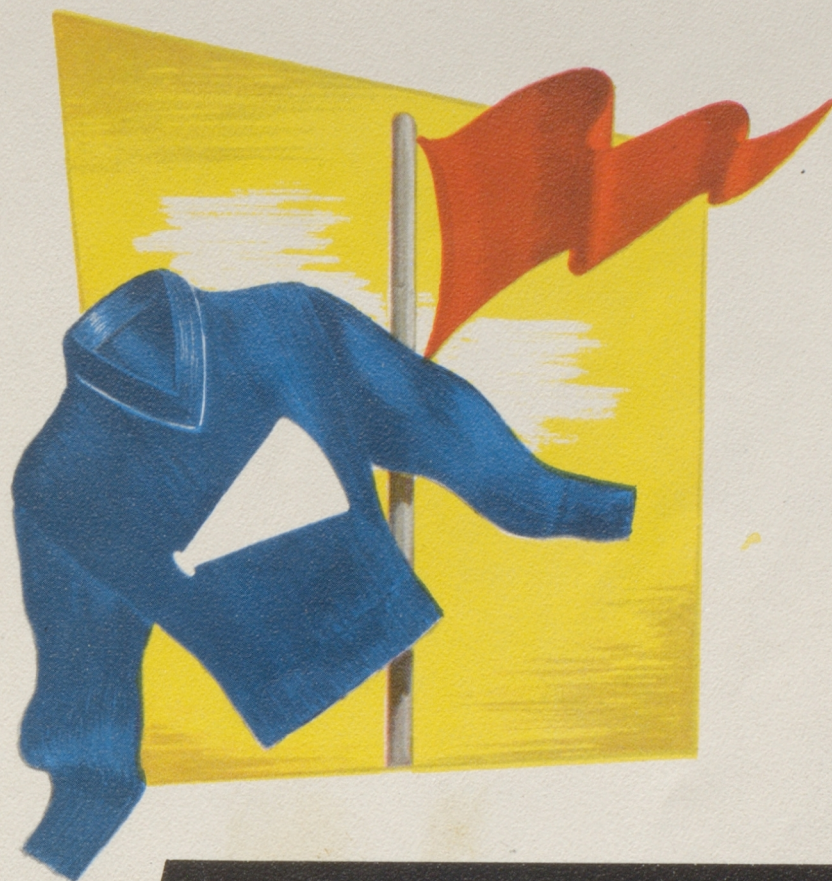

I, Joan Hughes, will my height to Taylor's future basketball team.

I, Vivian Head, leave the scent of my perfume lingering in the halls of Taylor High.

I, Henry Wright, leave Miss Clift without a paper boy.

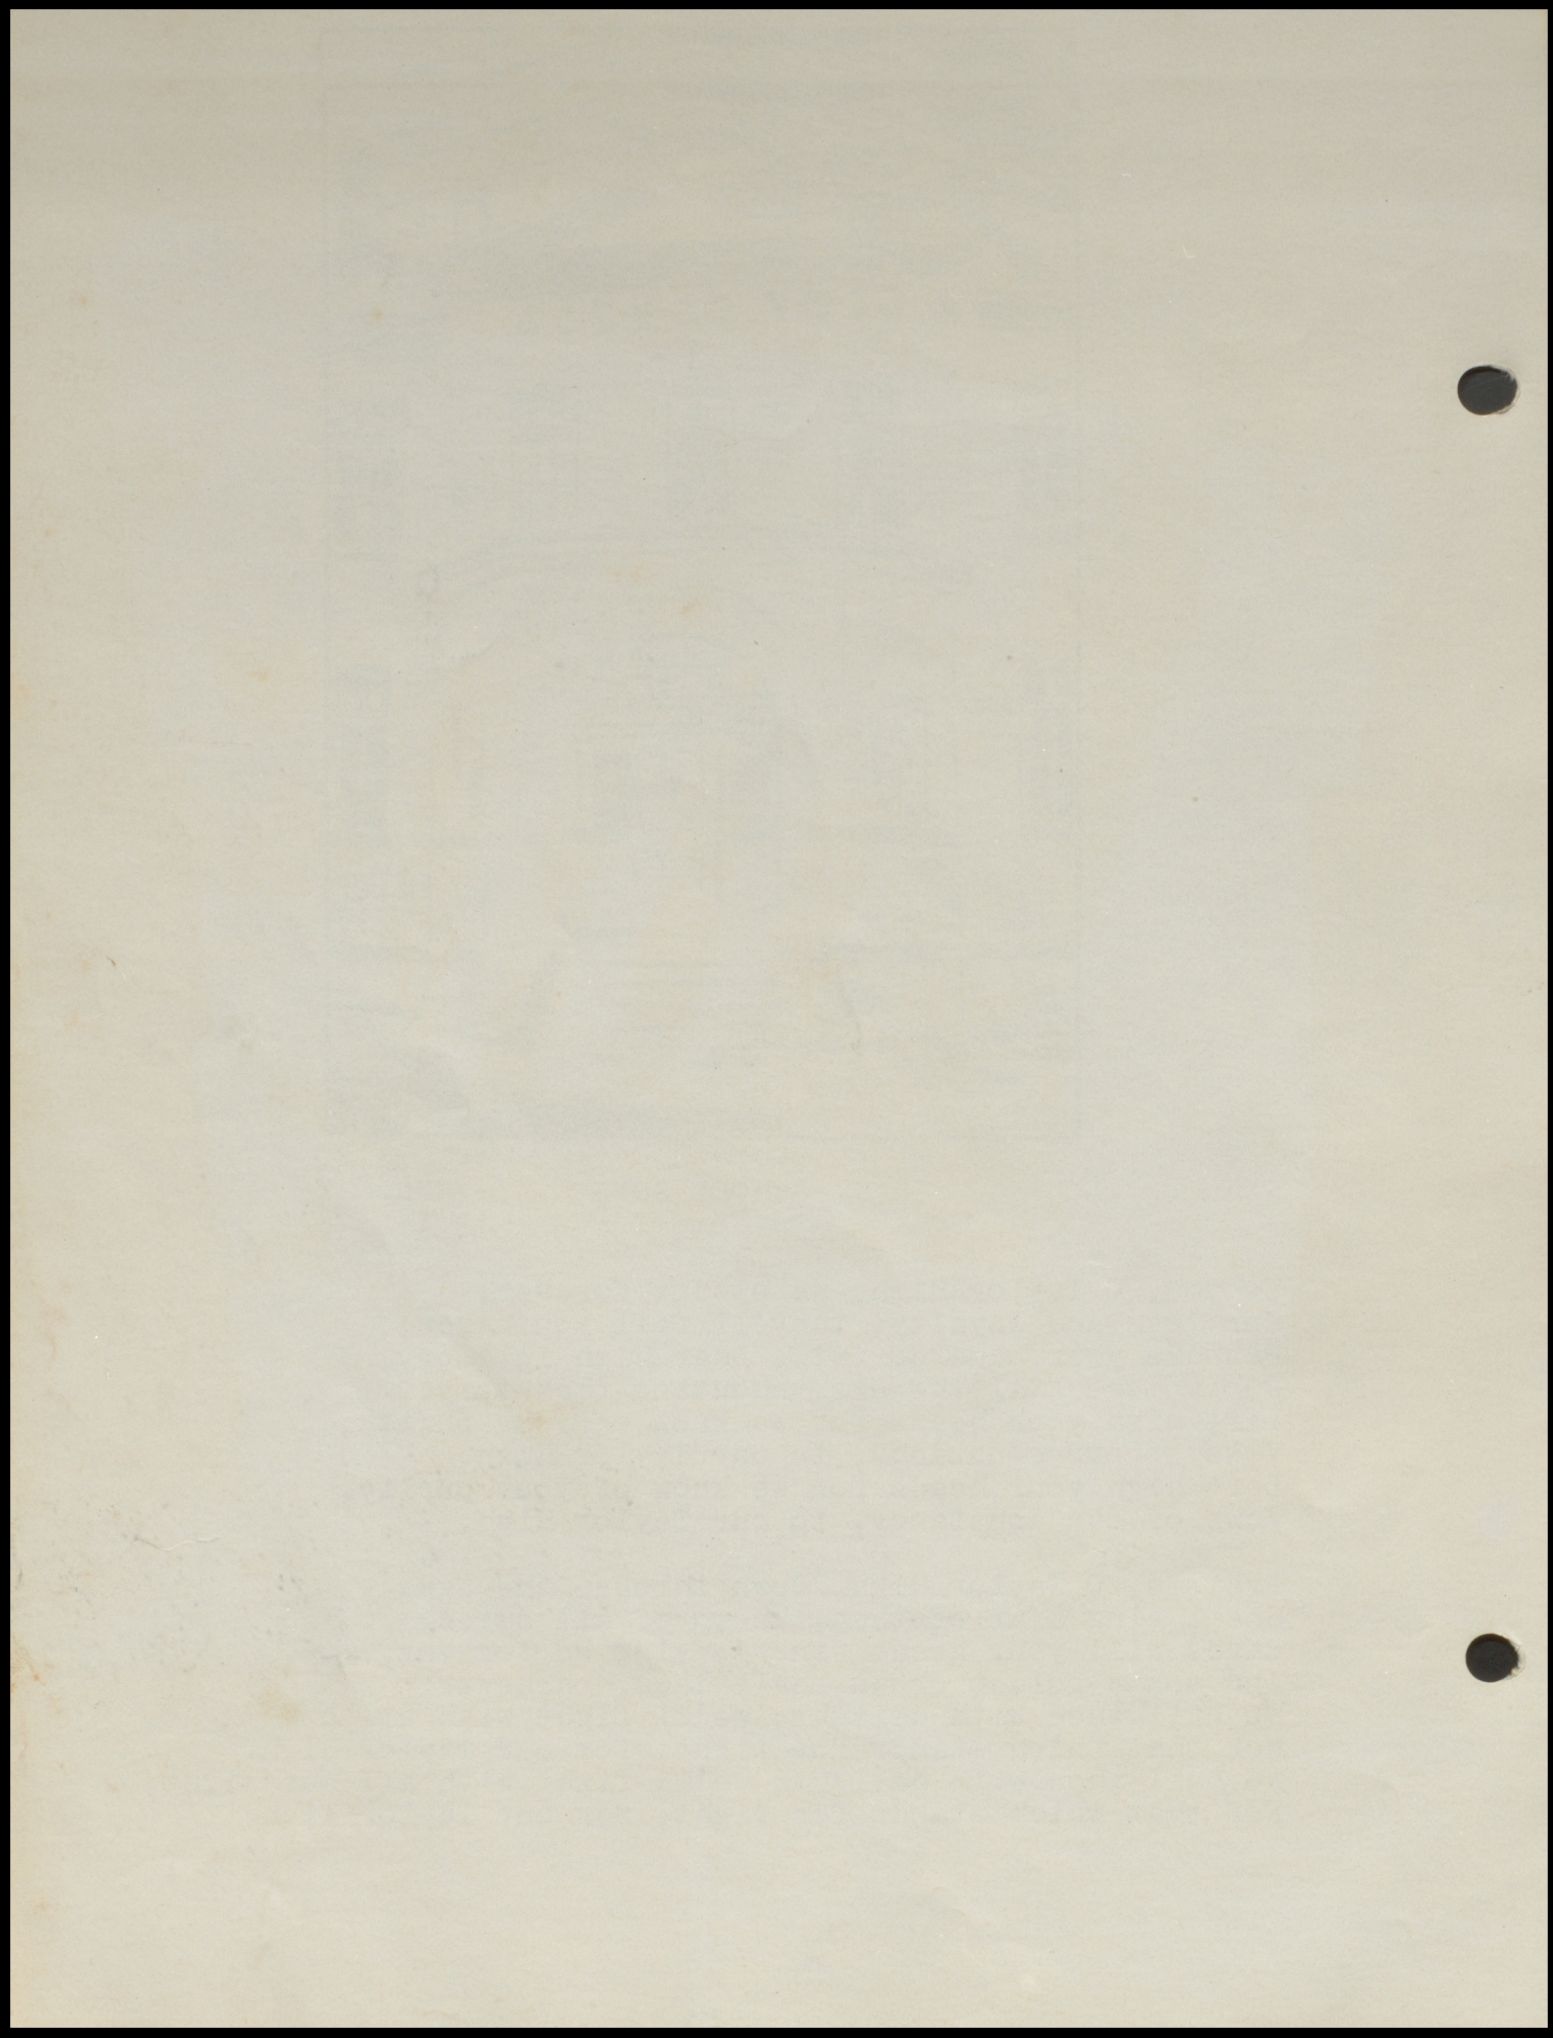

I, Elizabeth Jordan, will my athletic ability to Virginia Sims.

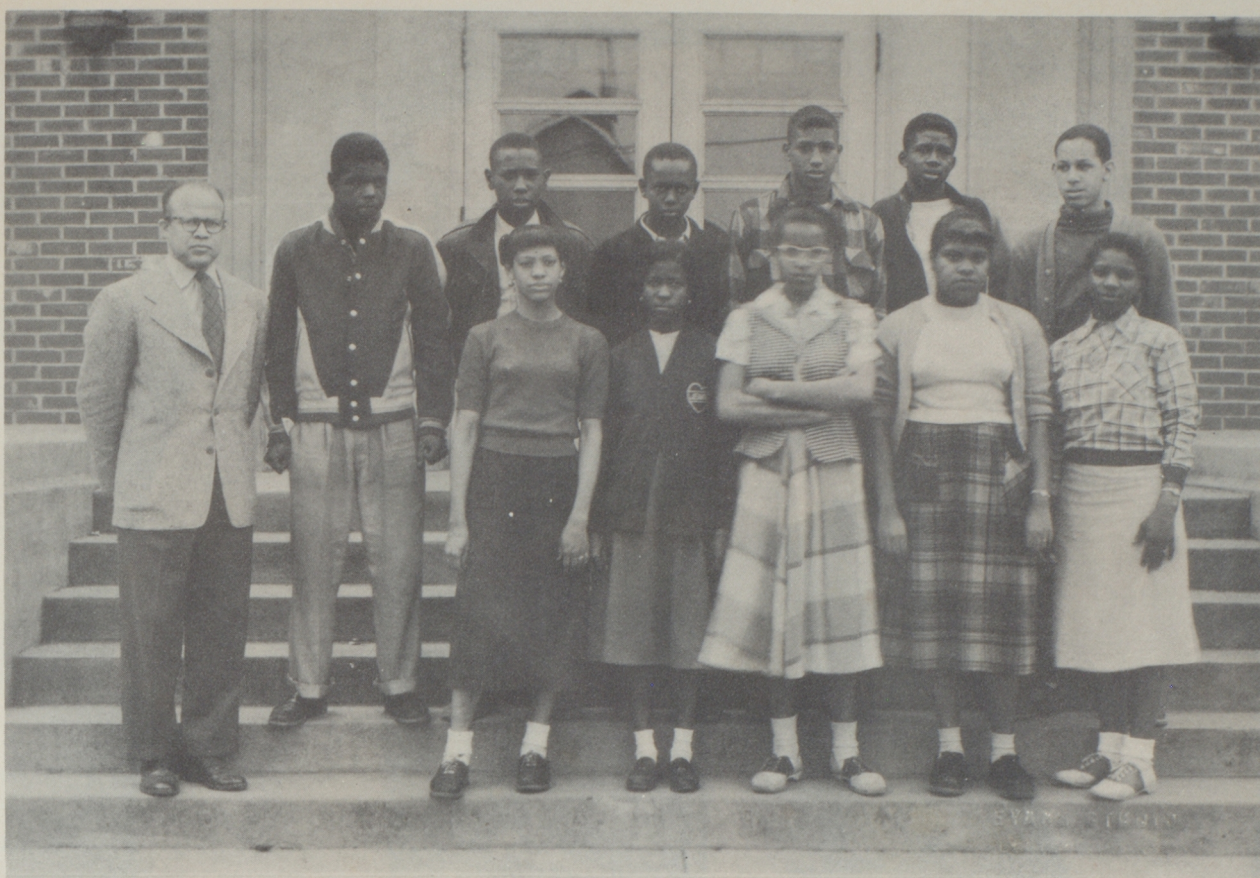

I, Ellison Hearn, will my ability as a politician and statesman to Clarence Thomas.

JUNIORS

Junior Class

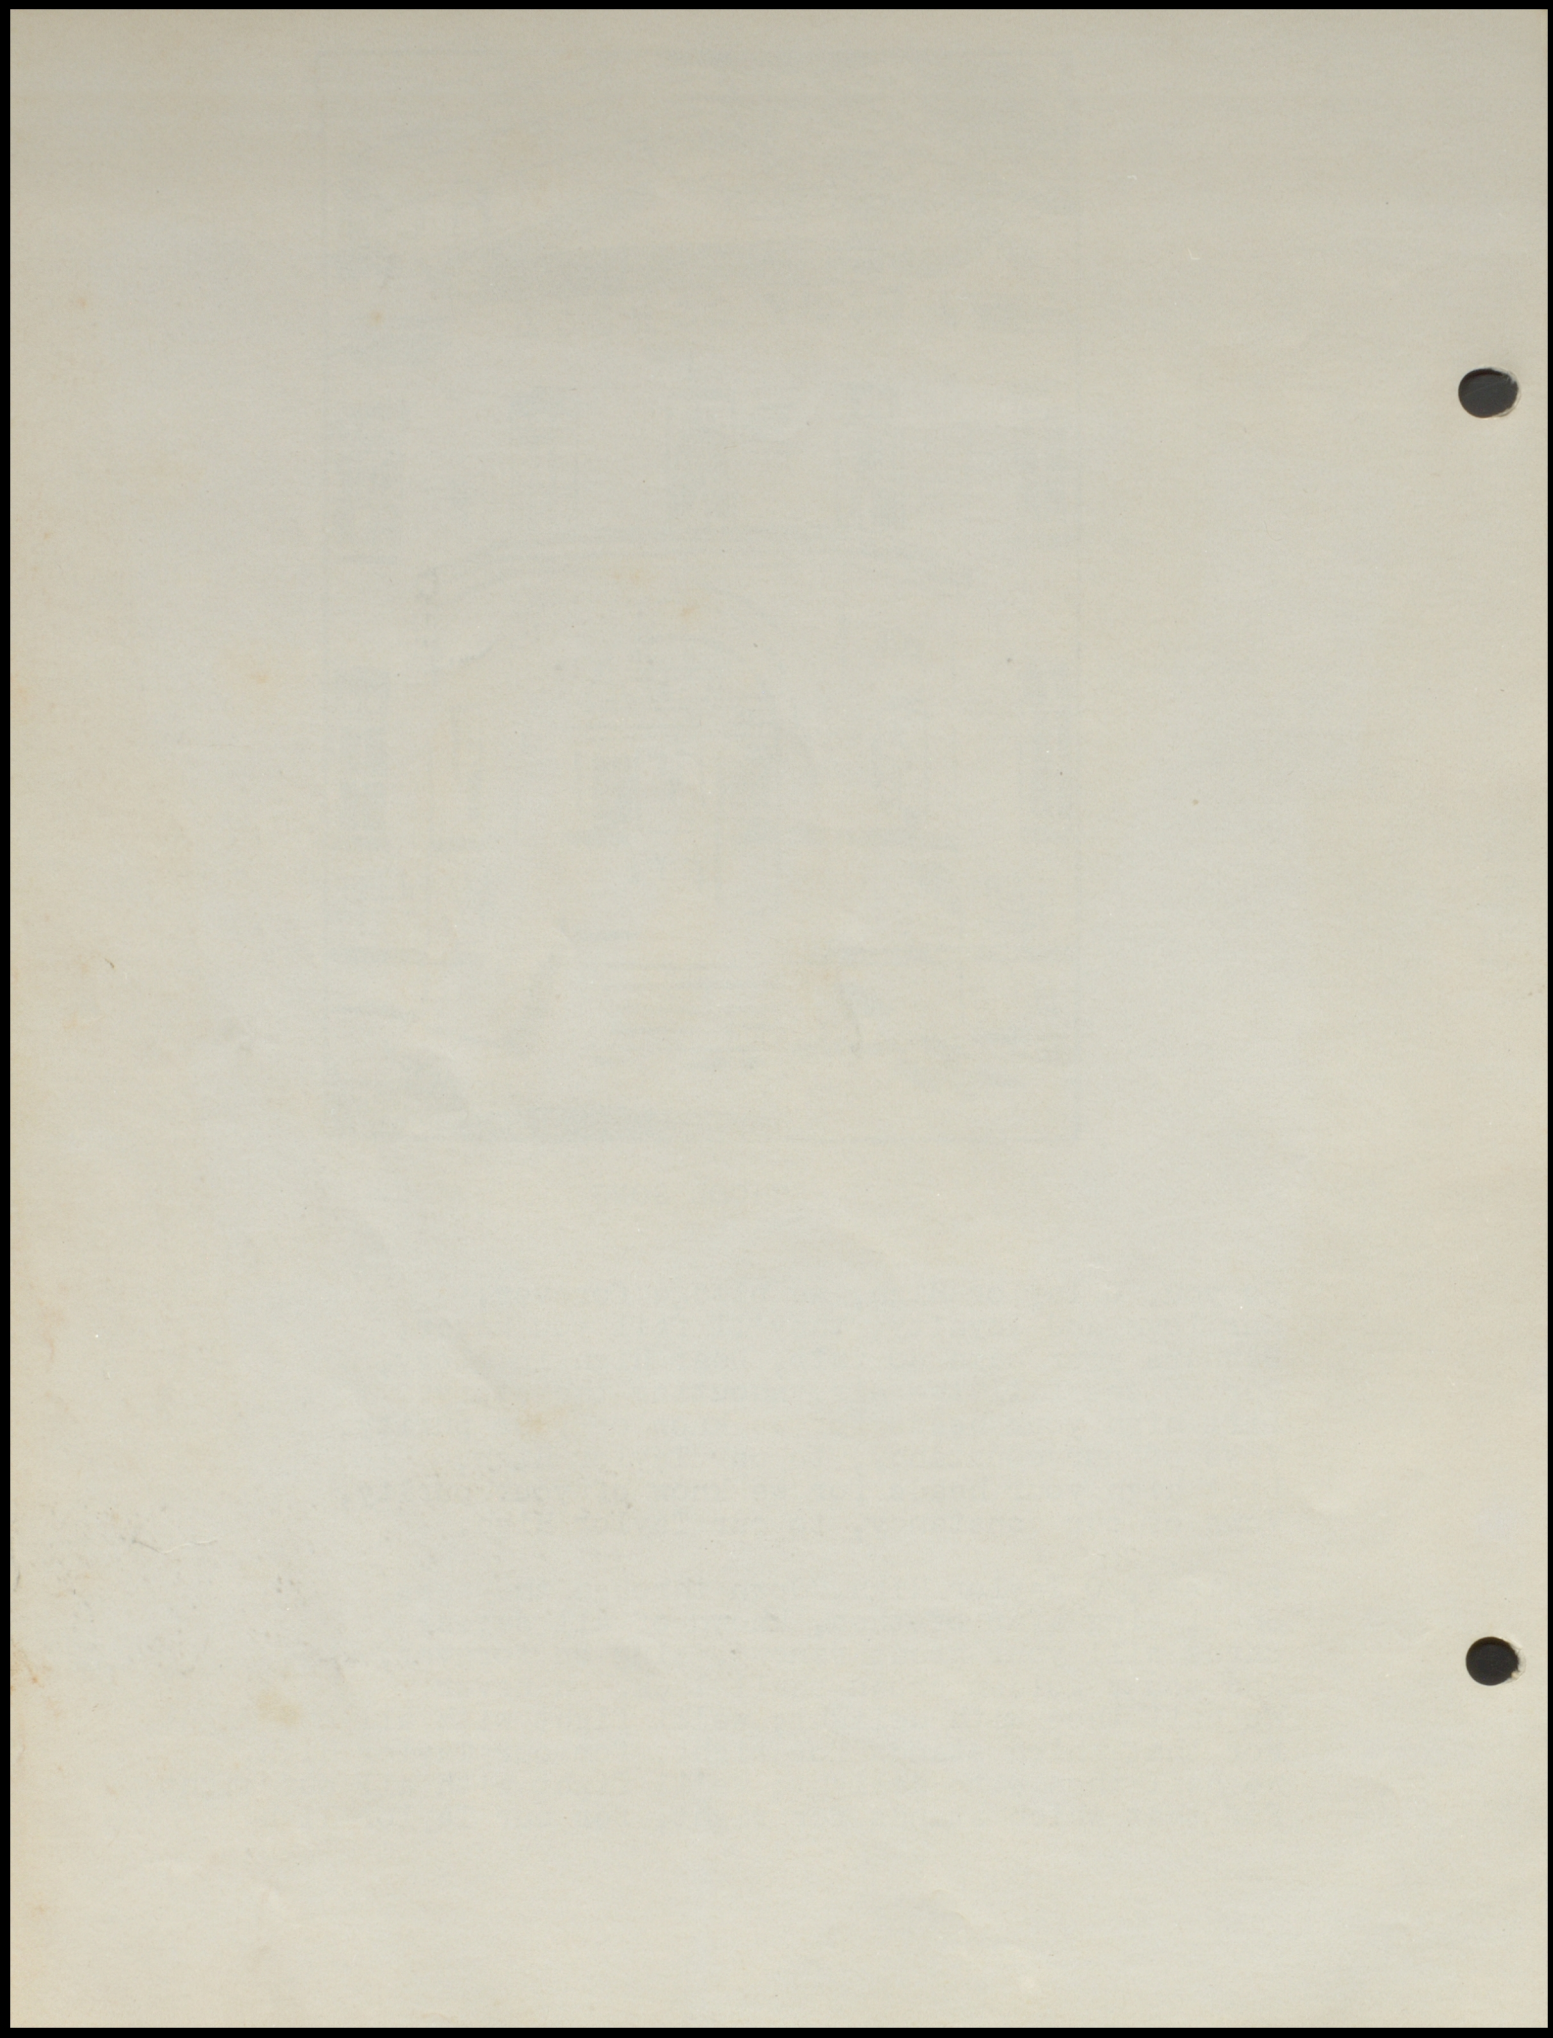

The class of 1952. The junior class of 1951 entered school the fall semester of 1950 full of energy and new ideas. Class officers were elected and plans for the 1950-1951 school year were put into effect.

Plans for electing prom king and queen to reign over the annual junior prom were added to the many ideas for the closing of the junior school year. We as a class are looking forward to a successful senior school year and feel that we have added another step toward the goal of every boy and girl who has preceded us on graduation day.
